NAN OF THE NORTH

SYNOPSIS:

"Adrift"

EPISODE NO. 12

Nan, leading the squad of mounted policemen, arrives at the saw mill just in time to save Driscoll from an awful death. Vane and Peralo escape, but Hays, after a bitter fight with Driscoll, is taken prisoner. To the utter astonishment of Hays, Driscoll removes from the coat he has been wearing the two vials of titano, hidden in a secret pocket of the uniform Hays had stolen.

Hays is taken to the police barracks and placed in a cell. While Nan, Driscoll and Gaspard, after a brief rest, resume their journey to the coast. Peralo and Vane learn their plans and go on ahead. Hays, freed from his cell by some of the bandits, follows after them.

Vane and Peralo endeavor to throw Nan and the others off the trail and into a branch path that contains a bear trap. But Igloo, the witch doctor saves them, and instead, one of Hays' men meets death in the bear pit.

Coming to a lake, Nan and her companions are loaned a motor-boat by the police officer stationed there. Peralo and Vane, obtaining a faster boat, give chase. While Hays and his men, riding along the shore of the lake, open fire upon both factions.

Overtaking Nan's boat, Peralo snatches Nan into his boat, Driscoll and Gaspard, their ammunition exhausted, being unable to prevent them. But Vane's boat catches fire, Vane and Peralo are forced to leap into the water, with Nan, tied up on the bottom of the boat, helpless as the flames reach the gas tank and a terrific explosion ensues.
